Hey look! It's the flying pig that gives "When Pigs Fly" so much pig-factor! Watch and learn how these beasts soars over this fantastic looking farm, and you might just have a flippin' great "When Pigs Fly" story to tell all your friends! When Pigs Fly! 3D Screensaver Screenshots: When Pigs Fly! 3D Screensaver ScreenshotQ: Joining and evaluating in a recursive function, C# I have a long list of data in an array that needs to be printed out in a sorted manner. The problem is I need the max, min and average for each different id. In my original version of this function, I was using separate functions to do the sort and then print out, and it was working fine. But I figured out that you could do the sort in one function (I'm not sure I'm doing it properly but anyways). Also I'm having problems with declaring multiple variables, so I thought I would check if I could just do all the calculations in one step using joins and the other functions. But I don't know how to make it work. Here is my working method of doing it for comparison: private static void test() { Console.WriteLine("Starting..."); Console.WriteLine("First Id: {0} ", id); PrintData(sorted_data[0]); Console.WriteLine("Second Id: {0} ", id); PrintData(sorted_data[1]); Console.WriteLine("Third Id: {0} ", id); PrintData(sorted_data[2]); Console.WriteLine("Fourth Id: {0} ", id); PrintData(sorted_data[3]); Console.WriteLine("Fifth Id: {0
