Designing text-heavy Web pages Web designers are among the most avid users of Photoshop. In fact, they use Photoshop to create all kinds of Web elements, including ads, buttons, typography, layout elements, and images for Web pages. Photoshop has long been a very popular tool for Web page design due to the many advanced features it offers to help Web designers create attractive pages. Photoshop's text and type creation tools are very powerful and are the leading choice for creating HTML-based typography on the Web. Photoshop has also become a common tool for creating graphics for e-mail marketing, and you can use a lot of Photoshop's drawing tools to create graphics for a wide variety of uses. Photoshop has seven tabs, as shown in Figure 6-2. The seven tabs are displayed in a tabbed interface so that when you select a tab, the tools in that area appear in the center of the workspace. Figure 6-2: With the help of several tools, you can create a variety of text and graphic effects. Photoshop has powerful drawing and typing tools. The basics of the drawing tools are similar to other drawing tools, but they offer many more options than are available in other drawing programs. You'll see more of the drawing tools in a moment, but for now, focus on the text and type tools. Drawing text with the Pen tool The Pen tool is used to create both text and graphics. In addition to manipulating text and graphics, the Pen tool can be used to select and convert text (see the "Highlighting and sorting text" sidebar later in the chapter for more information on this feature). It has eight main tools. The Pen tool is available in the drawing area of the workspace. The Brush tool is used to paint with color or apply a pattern (see the later section "Creating color patterns"). The Eraser tool is used to remove portions of graphics or canvas. The Marquee tool is a tool that allows you to select areas of a graphic or canvas and bring them together. (The Marquee tool is part of the selection tools, which are covered in Chapter 5.) The Shape tool is used to draw precise shapes on the canvas.

However, shortly afterwards she suggested that it was time they broke up, and started dating someone else, then Martin. Craig Fairbrass Craig appeared in the 2000 episode "Happiness" when Nancy discovers she has a wealthy aunt who left her fortune to her. Over the course of the episode she finds Craig while on holiday in the UK; Craig's young son Craigrhod John Craig, a child of his first marriage with Lani, is Nancy's cousin. Nancy invites him and his wife back to the family home. He is later killed in a car crash with Stuart Bracken, after the two of them get drunk on Martin's new tequila and are searching for the bottle. Nancy blames Martin, as does Stuart, who is convinced that Craig was trying to run Martin off the road, as is his father. Martin, who is sleeping with Craig's wife, Jane, sees Martin pushing Craig off the road, and is angry with Craig for hurting Nancy. Nancy advises Martin to find a new girlfriend. Craig's death pushes Martin, who is unfulfilled in his life, further into a rut; he spends many of his free afternoons sitting on the bridge, drinking tea. Robbie Savage Robbie made his first appearance on 24 February 2006, at Martin and Nancy's wedding. Robbie was a friend of Nancy who, after they were thrown out of the wedding, started to harass Martin. Later that evening, Nancy convinces Martin to walk her home from the pub and propose to her. However, Martin regrets it the next morning, and that evening, while driving through the night, he accidentally kills Robbie in an act of revenge. After Robbie's death, Martin withdrew from society, spending most of his time in the pub, drinking. Nancy urges him to find an outlet and start to live, and so he attends a sex club, where he meets a beautiful woman called Ailish. Martin takes her back to his flat, where they have a drunken one-night stand, and she, recognizing Martin's loneliness, marries him. She later suspects that Martin had a thing with Robbie because Ailish has blond hair. Lesley Bran
